

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC

School of International Studies

CAREERS

David Allen '11, taught English in South Korea as a Fulbright Scholar and now works for the World Bank in their Climate Change Group. He prepares briefings and talking points for senior management and organizes the World Bank delegations to key climate change events such as the California Global Climate Action Summit and the One Planet Summit.

Devon Blount '11, has worked in international finance at the largest auditing companies in the world, first at PwC (PricewaterhouseCoopers) and now at Deloitte. She works to prevent financial crimes and money laundering, and has extensive experience with the corresponding government policies such as the Bank Secrecy Act and Know Your Customer remediation.

Khatijah Corey '13, became a Pickering Undergraduate Foreign Affairs Fellow during her final year at Pacific. This prestigious fellowship helped to fund her MA degree from George Washington University and she is now a Foreign Service Officer at the US Department of State. She has served in Saudi Arabia and her next post will be in Mexico.

April Labaro '12, is both pursuing a Master's degree at George Washington University, and working for a nonprofit called Women for Women International. She works with the organization's grassroots partners as well as organizing fundraising events and working with donors.